Jenifer Wollman serves as the professional development committee chair on the executive committee for Immunize South Dakota, where she organizes educational events for health care professionals. These sessions include webinars, online forums, and other open-discussion avenues to help teach about, explain, and promote vaccinations. She and her team will be planning and executing the 5th annual Immunize South Dakota conference, which will be held in the fall of 2021.

In addition to her role with ISD, Jenifer is a pharmacist at the Avera Specialty Pharmacy, where she administers vaccinations to post-bone marrow transplant patients and patients who have other immunization needs based on age and health conditions. As a health care professional and follower of science, Jen promotes vaccinations and their benefits. Donating her time to help organize workshops or events that can educate people about immunization safety and efficacy is paramount in easing fears and answering questions that people may have about being immunized.

Jen graduated from North Dakota State University with a B.A. in humanities and social sciences. After a period of time in the workforce, she returned to academia at South Dakota State University. There, she earned her B.S. in pharmaceutical sciences and Doctor of Pharmacy. In 2019, she earned her specialty pharmacist certification.

In her free time, Jen loves to cook, read, watch movies with family, and spend time with friends in downtown Sioux Falls. She and her husband stay busy with their daughter's high school band activities and playing with their new pup Charlie. Jen loves to travel everywhere and learn new things, and she's always up for the next adventure.
